The new courts at Fairview Park

The Dedication of the Thomas H. Rapp Tennis Courts at Cosmo Park

May 15, 2007

Tennis players in Columbia have some new places to play! The Thomas H. Rapp Courts at Cosmo Park and the Fairview Park Tennis Courts were completely rebuilt late in 2006 and are now open for play.

Both tennis court projects were on the list of parks projects approved by voters in November 2005, when the parks sales tax was extended. The two complexes were more than 25 years old and in need of complete renovation. Fencing, asphalt, and drainage systems were removed first, then the rebuilding process started. The improvements include totally new courts with fencing, net posts, backboards and windscreens. New lighting is currently being installed at the Cosmo courts.

Four new courts were built at Fairview Park and eight new courts were built at Cosmo. The Cosmo courts were reconfigured; instead of one row of eight courts, there are two rows of four, which makes tournament planning simpler. Another improvement at both complexes is the installation of the "California corners" fencing configuration, which minimalize ball movement and eliminate the rigid appearance of ordinary square fencing.

A portion of the projects was funded by a $100,000 Public Facility Funding Grant from the United States Tennis Association (USTA). The remainder of the project--$650,000--was funded by the parks sales tax.

The newly renovated courts in part has led to the Parks and Recreation Department being named a 2007 Tennis in the Parks (TIP) community by the National Recreation and Parks Association and the USTA. This status is given to agencies that provide access to quality public tennis facilities and opportunities for the public to enjoy the sport by advancing the latest tennis innovations for all program types. In order to be considered for the facility funding grant, a community must qualify as a TIP community.

The City of Columbia appreciates the support shown by the community for the Cosmo and Fairview Park tennis courts. Thank you for being here today to share in the dedication ceremony.
